WORK & PLAY SPECIAL NEEDS RESOURCE CENTER

Bridging and connecting the respite care and resource knowledge gap for families and caregivers of those with special needs.

Improving Respite Care

The Work and Play SNRC, Inc takes an active approach to improve respite care. Through our resource center, we are connecting and/or training an underutilized group of potential caregivers with the families who need them.

Many government agencies provide respite for caregivers. The gap is the inability to hire someone and if you find someone, getting the individual trained in a timely fashion. There are several out there already trained but do not have the access to families that need them. Our goal is to offer the training in a timely fashion and help connect them to those that need them.

Improving Lives

The Work and Play Special Needs Resource Center provides a central location for therapy, gatherings, and information for those with developmental disabilities of all ages and their caregivers. Think of us as a hub for the special needs community. Having a resource center simplifies access to things needed to care for someone with developmental disabilities, which is desperately needed in an often complicated life with a child with special needs.

The Work and Play SNRC, Inc strives to take action that improves the lives of the members of the special needs communities. We are 100% volunteer ran nonprofit. Volunteers include parents and caregivers of those with special needs. This makes it easier for us to spot problems within the community and come up with viable solutions.

Raising Awareness

There are several non-profits striving to provide training and services to our special needs community but are limited due to lack of location?

Parents spend money needlessly on their children with special needs when there are resources out there that will help them?
